The Officers and Board of Directors of the United States Lakeland Terrier Club, Inc. would like to have as their health statement, "Currently the United States Lakeland Terrier Club does not require any testing. Health surveys are conducted on a regular basis and the results are tabulated. Currently no defect is known to affect more than about 1% of the population as reported. Some USLTC breeders, as a matter of procedure to protect the breed from future health issues that plague other breeds test eyes, hearts, and/or patellas, but there is no evidence to support mandatory testing. For the most current information, please visit the USLTC website at usltc.org"
